

Christina Carlson

Christina Carlson is a local artist who finds inspiration through her infinite love of nature. She grew up on Maryland's Eastern Shore and began by utilizing her beachcombing collection of sea glass, driftwood, and other natural materials to produce beautiful, framed works of art. Most recently, Christina has begun working with watercolor and acrylics, incorporating vibrant color into her pieces. She has created designs for public art including the Crab Bike Rack found at the Crisfield City Dock, a quilt block on display at the J. Millard Tawes Historical Museum as part of Somerset County's Quilt Trail and most recently, the Oyster Can Planter project for the Crisfield Arts and Entertainment District. She enjoys sharing her passions and inspiring others to seek their own creative expression through a variety of artist workshops. She is passionate about the outdoors, so it's no surprise to hear she serves as a Park Ranger in her professional career.
